

Household Gods

In 1912 Aleister Crowley wrote a play for Leila Waddell called Household Gods, it is a play and a poem of a man who falls in love with his servant girl, who seems to have supernatural powers. He tries to seduce his servant girl. The man discovers that his wife is cheating on him also. Animals begin to talk and a statue of Pan comes to life, The mans wife is with a man called a swan, The man and his servant girl approach the mans wife and the man kills his wifes lover.
