

Guide To Internet Broadcasting

This is a step by step guide to internet broadcasting and is a survey the rapidly evolving landscape of tools aimed at extending the promise of the first generation of online video sharing sites. For while YouTube made it easier to upload and share your videos, the new breed of video services make it easy for you to record, broadcast and arrange whole channels of homegrown video content. Whether you want to broadcast your life live, twenty-four hours a day, conduct a six-way interview with participants scattered all over the globe, or just put together great compilations of your favorite, thematically linked videos, there are now free services and tools that can make it possible. Who needs a studio when you can create your own media-rich Internet TV channel right from your web browser?
