

Anticipatory Prior Art: Contemporary Decisions (Intellectual Property Law Series)

This casebook contains 119 Federal Circuit Court of Appeals decisions that address the issue of anticipatory prior art. The selection of decisions spans from 2005 through the date of publication and the cases are listed in the order of frequency of citation. Under 35 U.S.C. 103, a patent claim is invalid if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art. The obviousness analysis is based on underlying factual inquiries including: (1) the scope and content of the prior art; (2) the level of ordinary skill in the art; (3) the differences between the claimed invention and the prior art; and (4) objective evidence of nonobviousness. *Celsis in Vitro, Inc. v.
