

High Hopes: The Amityville Murders

The book is based on trial testimony of the 1974 murder of the DeFeo family and takes place from the prosecutors point of view. Gerard Sullivan was the prosecutor in the case. The book tells of Ronnies nine year stay at the house on Ocean Ave. It tells how Ronnie starts to get mentally unstable, using drugs, getting into fights. It goes up to how Ronnie killed his family. Then it goes to the aftermath and the court and eventually his conviction. The book does not deal with anything supernatural and is only about the DeFeos. It also talks about the insanity plea. A very controversial event is also mentioned in the book. The event which is now unverifiable, tells of a 1972 drowning that may have been caused by Ronald DeFeo, Jr. The only mention of the haunting is in a sentence at the end of the book.
