

The Yoke

[...] Just outside the doorway of their shelter, Deborah and Rachel overlooked the troubled camp. Moses comes in time, Rachel said, speaking in a low tone, for Israel is in sore straits. The hand of the oppressor assaileth with fury his bones and his sinews now. How shall it be with him if he is bequeathed from Pharaoh to Pharaoh of an intent like unto the last three? He shall have perished from the face of the earth, for the Hebrew bends not; he breaks.

Deborah did not answer at once. Her sunken eyes were set and she seemed not to hear. But presently she spoke:[...].
